

DME Companies

Durable Medical Equipment, Prosthetics, Orthotics and Supply (DMEPOS or DME) Companies continue to face an elevated level of examination and scrutiny by the Federal government. Unfortunately, due to the lack of significant licensure requirements, DME companies have historically served as a vehicle for fraudsters and criminals to bilk the Medicare system for millions of dollars, even though the vast majority of DME suppliers are honest and providing legitimate services for their patients. The government reacted to this wave of fraud by taking a very hard line with DME companies, calling them "high risk" and conducting significant audits and investigations of DME claims. These actions, however, have negatively affected well-meaning DME providers.

If your DME company is facing audit issues with Medicare and its contractors, call Liles Parker today for a free consultation about your case.